How JELF Loans Work:

JELF's interest-free loans are intended to be 'last dollar' loans, which means that students are expected to assemble a financial aid package before applying for funding from JELF. JELF's 0% interest loans are most often used to pay for necessary living expenses, such as housing, meals, books, transportation, healthcare and more.

In addition to the online application, all applicants and their cosigners must meet with a Local JELF Administrator (LJA) for a personal interview. JELF conducts a semi-annual Loan Review process, during which each JELF applicant is screened anonymously to make tough funding decisions.

Loan Repayment:

JELF loans are always deferred while a student is in school. Then, 6 months after a student's final graduation, JELF's repayment period begins. Students then have 8 years to repay their loan at a graduated repayment rate, which means that monthly payments increase gradually (every two years).

JELF's repayment rate has been at a consistent 99% for over 12 years. This tells us that not only are our students becoming capable, independent professionals, but they also value the need to recycle JELF's funds within the Jewish community.
